1 次の英文を読んで、あとの設問に答えなさい。(＊印のある語は 注 を参考にしなさい)

I was born in ＊England in 1632. I had two older brothers. One of them died when he was still very young. The other was (①) in the war against Spain. My father was a very clever man, and he taught me a lot about his business. He wanted me to work for him when I grew older, though I always wanted to be a ＊sailor and travel all over the world to experience lots of exciting adventures. My father often said if I stayed at home, I would have a very good life. My parents were old, and I was the only son to take over the family business. He also said, “Only very rich or very poor people go to sea. People in (②) like us stay at home and take care of the family business.” However, that sounded very boring to me.

When I turned eighteen, I told my parents that it was the time. I didn’t want to work for my father, and I asked my parents to let me go to sea instead. I promised that if I didn’t like life at sea, I would come home and never raise ^③the subject again. My mother cried when she heard this, and my father said, “If you leave home, ＊God can’t help you, and (④) can we. I won’t let you do it!” Then, I had to stay home, but I never gave up my dream of traveling around the world as a sailor.

About a year later, I went to a town to visit a friend who was a sailor. He told me many exciting stories about life at sea. In (⑤), I decided to board his ship without telling my parents. Soon after we sailed there, the wind began to blow, and the waves looked bigger than mountains. I got sick and was afraid that I was going to die. The ship shook a lot, and I thought it was going to break in half. When a big wave hit the ship, ^⑥I was sure God was making me pay for leaving my parents. I promised God that if he let me survive, I would go back home and never stand on a ship again. In the evening the wind got weak, and the sea became very (⑦). I sat and watched the sunset and the sunrise again the next morning. I looked down at the quiet waves. Was this the same sea I saw the day before?

“Well, Robinson,” said my friend while he was putting his hand on my shoulder.

“How are you feeling today? You looked a little scared by the wind yesterday.”

^⑧“The wind, you say? That was a typhoon!” answered I.

“A typhoon?” laughed he. “You call that typhoon! Why? That was not special at all!”

When we arrived back in England, (⑨). I walked around the streets and tried to decide where I should go next. Then, I met the captain of a ship that was leaving for Africa the next day. When he heard I was (⑩) for something exciting, he said I could get on his ship, not as a sailor, but as his friend. I agreed, and we sailed for Africa the next morning.

As we passed by an island early one morning, our ship was attacked by pirates. We sailed as fast as possible, but the pirate ship was faster than ours. Our sailors began to prepare for a fight. We had only twelve big guns on our ship, and the pirates had eighteen. We could see over two hundred men on their ship. At first about sixty pirates came to us and tried to shoot at us. We fought against them but then another group of pirates from the ship boarded our ship. After a long fight, we (⑪) most of our sailors and had to give up. We were caught and taken to the port near Egypt. My new master made me work for him with his other sailors in Egypt. A few weeks earlier I was a free young man in England! I just stood with tears in my eyes and remembered my father's words.

For the next two years I took care of the master's house and waited for my opportunity to (⑫) away. Every night I dreamed about going back to England. Then, one morning the master ordered me to go fishing with others. He was too busy to go with us. I finally got my chance to escape!
